UK Outlook for Friday 3 Sep 2021 to Friday 17 Sep 2021:
Confidence exceptionally low across this period. The most probable scenario is that conditions will be close to what is expected for late summer and early autumn. A possible split in conditions between the northwest and southeast is likely. Showers or longer spells of rain, together with strong winds, may affect northwestern areas, with these conditions spreading southeast to other parts of the UK at times. Any more prolonged dry and settled weather is most likely in the southeast. Temperatures are expected to be near average, perhaps warmer in the south and east.
